

Kenneth J. McCarthy

Kenneth J. McCarthy is Chief Economist of vFinance Investments, Inc. He oversees all of the firm's economic analysis and research including the vFinance Entrepreneurial Confidence Index, vFinance's proprietary research tool for understanding and profiting from the entrepreneurial activity in the US.

For 10 years prior to joining vFinance, Mr. McCarthy headed the Economic Intelligence Company (EIC), a private consulting company that provided economic analysis and advice to Fortune 500 firms. Ken was also associated for 14 years with Rinfret Associates, Inc., an international intelligence firm headed by prominent economist Pierre Rinfret, where he served as Senior Vice President

Ken received a Bachelor of Arts degree in economics from St. Anselm College in New Hampshire, a Master of Arts degree from Fordham University.

As Chief Economist of vFinance Investments, Ken has said: "There is nothing more important to the American economy than the spirit of entrepreneurship. I believe vFinance is uniquely positioned among all major brokerage firms to understand this vital sector of the US economy and help its customers profit from that knowledge."
