

Mervin Jebaraj is the Director for the Center for Business & Economic Research at the Sam M. Walton College of Business at the University of Arkansas. He has been with the CBER since 2007, first as a researcher, then as assistant director, and was named director in 2017.

Jebaraj has also worked as an independent consultant providing economic policy and political analysis for federal, state and local political candidates in Arkansas and training them for debates and forums.

In 2021, Jebaraj was elected as board member for the National Association for Business Economics (NABE).

Jebaraj earned both of his degrees from the University of Arkansas, a master's in public administration and public policy and a bachelor's in economics, international relations and European studies (summa cum laude).

Born in the United Arab Emirates, he can speak five languages.